LITIGATION

Despite best practices and best intentions, dental professionals often end up in disputes or litigation. The Pierce & Mandell, P.C. legal team has decades of experience with litigation matters, governmental audits, mediations, arbitrations and various other conflicts that may arise in your dental practice.

- After buying or selling a dental practice, buyers and sellers regularly dispute the terms of the relevant practice sale agreements. These disputes may end up in court or in private arbitration or mediation. Having experienced, practical and aggressive representation is always in your best interest. Pierce & Mandell, P.C.'s litigators have extensive experience negotiating agreements if possible, taking cases to trial when necessary, and helping dental professionals protect their interests.
- When a dental professional leaves or joins a dental practice, disputes often arise over compensation, employee misclassification and non-competition restrictions, to name a few. It is vital to have attorneys represent you whether you are the employee seeking earned compensation or a practice owner seeking to enforce a non-compete provision.
- Dental practice break-ups regularly lead to litigation. The business litigators at Pierce & Mandell, P.C. have handled all types of business "divorce" cases. It is vital to have the right representation if involved in a dental practice break-up or dissolution.

DISCIPLINARY PROCEEDINGS

- It is critically important for dental professionals who face disciplinary proceedings before the Board of Registration in Dentistry to have legal representation. Pierce & Mandell, P.C.'s attorneys regularly advise dentists, dental hygienists and dental assistants on Board proceedings.
